

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a method for reducing noise generated in a turbo engine with cascades, and a stator-rotor arrangement, in which hydrodynamic pressure fluctuations occurring on the cascades are reduced by varying the surface circulation of at least one section of at least one stator. A structure is provided on one or more stators, influencing the surface circulation of at least one section of the stator.